Benz, Internal-combustion Engine

Carl Benz 1844-1929
The German-born mechanical engineer-Carl Benz-designed and built the world's first practical automobile that was powered by an internal-combustion engine. This three-wheeled vehicle was first successfully demonstrated in 1885. His firm, Benz & Cie. in Mannheim, manufactured its first standard four-wheeled automobile in 1893. Six years later, under the direction of Benz, the company produced its first racer. The Benz & Cie. firm merged with Daimler-Motoren-Gesellschaft, in 1901 to produce Daimler-Benz which continues to produce the most admired line of Mercedes-Benz automobiles.

Einstein, Theory of Relativity

Albert Einstein 1879-1955
The German-born Jewish physicist-Albert Einstein-gained international acclaim in 1919 at the age of 40 when one of his predictions concerning his revolutionary concept of the general theory of relativity was verified. Two years later, Einstein was awarded the prestigious Nobel Prize for Physics in recognition of his important scientific research in the field of photoelectric law and work in theoretical physics. After Adolf Hitler rose to power in Germany in 1933, Einstein, because of his Jewish faith, was forced to abandon his homeland. He spent the rest of his life at Princeton University in New Jersey, where he taught at the Institute for Advanced Studies.

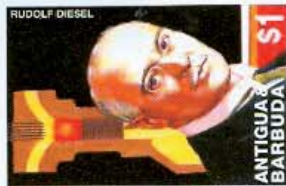

1935
Godowsky & Mannes, Kodachrome Film

Leopold Godowsky, Jr. 1901-1983 & Leopold Damrosch Mannes 1889-1964
Both Leopold Godowsky and Leopold Mannes were talented professional musicians, the sons of world-renowned musicians. The two young Leopolds met at the Riverdale Country School, a private school in New York City, and became close friends. As teenagers, they saw a short film in color about the U.S. Navy. Disappointed by the poor color quality, they set off to develop a better system, unaware that the goal had challenged hundreds of prominent scientists during the previous half century. Word of their research, a decade later, attracted the attention of the Eastman Kodak Company, which bankrolled their further experiments. The result was the spectacular release of Kodachrome in 1935, a major breakthrough that dramatically changed the face of color photography.

1939
Von Ohain, Jet Turbine Engine

Dr. Hans Pabst von Ohain 1911-1998
After earning a Doctorate in Physics from the University of Göttingen in 1935, Hans Pabst von Ohain began conducting research at the University's Physical Institute. The following year, he started working for the German aircraft builder Ernst Heinkel, conducting secret experiments for producing a jet turbine engine. The two together invented the jet engine which was used to power the Heinkel He 178 aircraft on its historic flight on August 27, 1939. After World War II, von Ohain immigrated to the United States and became an engineer for the U.S. Air Force where he became Director of the U.S. Air Force Research Laboratory in Dayton, Ohio. He was elected to the International Aerospace Hall of Fame in 1982.

Diesel, Diesel Engine

Rudolf Diesel 1859-1913

Even in France, but educated in Germany at the Technische Hochschule of Munich, Rudolf Diesel worked mostly in Switzerland and Paris. In 1885, he began experimenting on an internal-combustion engine that would be used widely in automobiles, trains, ships and stationary power plants. Known as the diesel engine, it was first demonstrated successfully in 1893 and further improved in 1897. The first version which was made to run in 1897 was a great commercial success. It was used to make the automobile a practical means of transportation. Diesel also developed a new type of power source in which the diesel engine was powered by an electric generator. This power source could be used to drive ships, boats or locomotive trains.

1893

Zeppelin, The Zeppelin Balloon

Ferdinand von Zeppelin 1838-1917

A German military officer in the armies of Württemberg, Prussia and Imperial Germany, Ferdinand von Zeppelin served as a military observer with the Union Army during the American Civil War. It was during that tour of service that he made his first balloon ascension in St. Paul, Minnesota, in 1891. He retired from the German army with the rank of lieutenant general in order to work on developing the rigid airship that is now commonly called the Zeppelin. Nine years later, on July 2, 1900, near Friedrichshafen, the LZ-1, the first of the Zeppelins, made its maiden flight. During World War I, Zeppelin's rigid dirigibles helped the German war effort. In the years between the two world wars, von Zeppelin's distinctive aircraft gained popularity around the world for their transatlantic commercial flights.

1901

Röntgen, X-rays

Wilhelm Conrad Röntgen 1845-1923

Wilhelm Conrad Röntgen was the first scientist to be awarded the Nobel Prize for Physics. He was thus honored in 1901 in recognition of his revolutionary breakthrough in medical science as a result of his discovery of X-rays, also known as Röntgen radiation. His published scientific papers on his discovery of X-rays generated great excitement both in scientific circles and amongst the general public. Medical researchers were quick to grasp the significance of Röntgen's discovery that allowed doctors to better diagnose and develop appropriate therapies for conditions in the body that were not previously discernible. X-rays can also be used to stop the spread of malignant tumors. Röntgen never patented his invention or sought to profit financially from his discovery of X-rays.

von Braun, Satellite

Wernher von Braun 1912-1977

This German-born engineer earned a doctorate degree from the University of Berlin in 1933. Shortly after gaining his Ph.D., von Braun became the technical director of a large German military rocket development facility in Peenemünde. His work resulted in the development of the V-2 missiles that were used to bomb England during World War II. Following the defeat of Germany, von Braun, after surrendering to the Americans, was offered the chance to work for the U.S. military. He came to America and continued his research at the Army Ordnance Corps test facility at White Sands, New Mexico. Von Braun joined the work on space exploration for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). He and his army team of rocket researchers were responsible for the launching of the first American satellite, Explorer I, on January 31, 1958.

PREHISTORIC MAMMALS

Mammals began to appear on Earth about 220 million years ago. For more than 150 million years, throughout the Jurassic and Cretaceous periods, mammals were small scavengers and plant eaters, living in the shadow of the dinosaurs.

The world underwent cataclysmic changes at the end of the Mesozoic Era, when the dinosaurs disappeared. New environments, including rain forests and savannas, provided favorable conditions for a diversity of mammals.

The Ice Ages that began 2 million years ago put pressure on many species and the total number shrank drastically. Rapidly changing climates prompted sweeping evolutionary changes. Large mammals with a high degree of mobility developed complex nervous systems capable of making increasingly sophisticated responses.

Scott 268

The dinosaurs and their kin — the crocodiles and flying pterosaurs — dominated the air, land and waters of the earth during the Mesozoic Era. This 'Age of the Ruling Reptiles' began more than 200 million years ago. During this span of almost 140 million years, some of nature's most awesome beasts evolved — carnivorous dinosaurs standing 20ft/6 m tall, plant-eating dinosaurs some 85ft/ 26 m long, an apteryx with a wingspan of some 40ft/12.2 m. The sole surviving member of this great assemblage of 'ruling reptiles' (the archosaurs) are today's crocodiles, with an evolutionary history stretching back some 230 million years.

The first step in the evolution of the ruling reptiles was taken in the Late Permian period, some 230 million years ago. A new line of small, diapsid reptiles evolved, called the 'proterosuchians'. From them radiated a variety of reptiles called the 'thecodontians'. They thrived during the subsequent Triassic period, and some of their members became progressively more skilled at walking upright on 2 legs. The dinosaurs arose from such a stock of 2-legged thecodontians, called the 'ornithomichians'. The crocodiles descended from the same line, and probably also the flying pterosaurs.

Zeppelin

the man and his airships

The first flight of the first Zeppelin airship, LZ-1, took place on July 2, 1900. The ship was 116 feet long and 38.5 feet in diameter with 399,000 cubic feet of hydrogen in 17 gasbags. She had a total lift of 27,400 pounds but weighed nearly 13 tons. This meant that only about 15,000 pounds of lift was left for the crew, fuel, and water ballast. The control surfaces consisted of tiny rudders above and below the hull at the bow and on the sides of the hull at the stern. The sliding weight was suspended 80 feet beneath the hull. The LZ-1 made only 8 miles per hour on this first flight but reached 17 miles per hour on her second flight.

Robert L. Stevens

Son of Col. John Stevens, was a great engineer and railroad pioneer in his own right. In October of 1830, he sailed to England for the purpose of purchasing rail and locomotive trains for the Mohawk and Hudson Line. Stevens was responsible for designing and developing the steel "T" rails which are still in mainline use today. The first imported shipments were laid on granite stone ties, hewn by the convicts at New York's Sing-Sing prison. Along with Isaac Dripps, Stevens was a major force in perfecting the famous "John Bull", put into regular service in 1831.

The 175th Anniversary of the First Public Railways

One hundred and seventy five years ago construction of what would become the world's first public railway began, between Stockton, Darlington and Bishop Auckland in County Durham, in North England. The Stockton and Darlington was no brainchild of a single man or group of men. It was the outcome of many years of experimentation trial and error, which cumulatively created the steam railways of the 1830's.

Some of the foremost inventors and engineers of their time were instrumental in bringing about the age of steam and the first public railways. From the wooden railway to transport stone built by Ralph Allen (1733) to the early efforts of Thomas Newcomen, James Watt and Richard Trevithick, perseverance and ingenuity was bound to replace the horse and change society profoundly, forevermore.

But it was George Stephenson whose persistence and attention to detail and his vision which enabled the Stockton-Darlington railway to be the first herald of a future in which passengers, mail, and cargo would reliably move across great strengths of rail.

3. U.S. nuclear-powered attack submarine LOS ANGELES.
4. 1,000-ton conventional French DAPHNE submarine.
5. 6,000-ton U.S. OHIO — strategic missile submarine.
6. U.S. Navy Jack — manta ray.

There are several different types of submarines. The Standard Conventional Submarine is the most common and is utilized in the navies of many nations. They are used to patrol and defend friendly coastlines. Attack Submarines are larger and more sophisticated than conventional submarines. These nuclear subs boast great range and can operate away from friendly forces for long periods. Strategic Missile Submarines are in effect, moving forward bases for nuclear missiles that can be used to attack targets of surface ships or nearby land targets.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO

LEGEND OF THE SILENT SCREEN

Rudolph Valentino (1895-1926)

Born in Castellaneta, Taranto, Italy Rudolph Valentino became one of the most strongly individual stars in the history of cinema. He fulfilled all the fantasies of the romantic Latin lover for generations of female admirers. His success following his performance in The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse (1921) was immediate. He is probably most closely identified with his characterizations in The Sheik (1921) and The Son of the Sheik (1926). His death in 1926 was accompanied by unprecedented hysteria by inconsolable female fans.

Shirley Temple the LITTLE PRINCESS

In 1939, Shirley Temple made her first full-length Technicolor appearance in The Little Princess, based on the children's novel by Frances Hodgson Burnett. In this lavish film, Shirley goes from riches to rags in Victorian England. Doubtful of her soldier father's death, she searches for him while slaving as a scullery maid — and eventually meets Queen Victoria! One of her best roles, Shirley danced ballet in an elaborate fantasy sequence and showed her dramatic acting range alongside a cast of stellar co-stars, including Cesar Romero and Arthur Treacher.

MOTHER HEN AND HER BROOD
WANG NING (11TH CENTURY A.D.)

THIS PICTURE, DONE BY WANG NING IN THE SONG DYNASTY, SHOWS A HEN WITH HER CHICKS. A COMMON TECHNIQUE EMPLOYED WAS ONE WHEREBY THE VARIOUS ELEMENTS OF A PAINTING WERE FIRST OUTLINED IN INK AND THEN FILLED IN WITH COLOR. WHILE SONG ARTISTS SOUGHT TO CREATE REALISTIC, LIFELIKE IMAGES, THEIR CREATIVITY FOLLOWED CAREFULLY CIRCUMSCRIBED PATTERNS: THEY FIRST MINUTELY OBSERVED THEIR SUBJECTS, AND ONLY THEN TOOK UP INK AND COLOR TO BRING THEM TO LIFE ON THE PAINTED SURFACE, IMBUING THEM WITH THE SPIRIT OF THE OBSERVED PHENOMENA. THIS CAREFUL ATTENTION TO TECHNIQUE CAN BE SEEN IN THIS PAINTING.

THE SECOND DECADE

Queen Elizabeth II ascended the throne on February 6, 1952 upon the death of her father, King George VI. Her Coronation followed on June 2, 1953. The Queen celebrated her Golden Jubilee (50 years since her accession) in 2002. Queen Elizabeth II is the United Kingdom's Head of State. She is queen of 16 former British colonies, including Australia, Canada and New Zealand; and head of the Commonwealth, a multinational body created after the dissolution of the British Empire. Her Majesty The Queen's title in the United Kingdom is 'Elizabeth the Second, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland'. The Queen's other duties include approving legislation and acting as the Head of the Armed Services and of the Church of England.

2006 marks the 80th birthday of the Queen. The Government and people of Antigua & Barbuda take this opportunity to wish Queen Elizabeth II a Happy Birthday and many more happy years ahead as the Queen of England.

The above portrait of Queen Elizabeth II was painted by the world renowned Nigerian artist, Chinwe Chukwuogo-Roy.

The portrait in oils was commissioned by the Commonwealth Secretariat to mark the Queen's Jubilee and the Commonwealth Games in Manchester in 2002.

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart was born in Salzburg, Austria, 27 January 1756 and died in Vienna on 5 December 1791. Considered one of the greatest musical geniuses of all time, Mozart authored over six hundred works before his premature death at the age of thirty-five.

The son of orchestra leader Leopold Mozart, he showed remarkable musical talent early in life. Mozart played the harpsichord by the age of four, composed music by the age of five and performed his first recital at the age of six for the Empress of Austria. In his short life, Mozart composed many masterpieces including symphonies, chamber music, church music, operas, and operettas. Most of his works are still famous today. Mozart's untimely passing was the world's loss. Ironically, despite his brilliance as a composer and fame and position in the Austrian Emperor's Court, Mozart was buried in a pauper's grave.

1885
Benz, Internal-combustion Engine

Carl Benz 1844-1929
The German-born mechanical engineer-Carl Benz-designed and built the world's first practical automobile that was powered by an internal-combustion engine. This three-wheeled vehicle was first successfully demonstrated in 1885. His firm, Benz & Cie. in Mannheim, manufactured its first standard four-wheeled automobile in 1893. Six years later, under the direction of Benz, the company produced its first racer. The Benz & Cie firm merged with Daimler-Motoren-Gesellschaft, in 1900, to create the Daimler-Benz which continues to produce the most admired line of Mercedes-Benz automobiles.

1919
Einstein, Theory of Relativity

Albert Einstein 1879-1955
The German-born Jewish physicist-Albert Einstein-gained international acclaim in 1919 at the age of 40 when one of his predictions concerning his revolutionary concept of the general theory of relativity was verified. Two years later, Einstein was awarded the prestigious Nobel Prize for Physics in recognition of his important scientific research in the field of photoelectric law and work in theoretical physics. After Adolf Hitler rose to power in Germany in 1933, Einstein, because of his Jewish faith, was forced to abandon his homeland. He spent the rest of his life at Princeton University in New Jersey, where he taught at the Institute for Advanced Studies.

1935
Godowsky & Mannes, Kodachrome Film

Leopold Godowsky, Jr. 1901-1983 & Leopold Damrosch Mannes 1889-1964
Both Leopold Godowsky and Leopold Mannes were talented professional musicians, the sons of world-renowned musicians. The two young Leopolds met at the Riverdale Country School, a private school in New York City, and became close friends. As teenagers, they saw a short film in color about the U.S. Navy. Disappointed by the poor color quality, they set off to develop a better system, unaware that the goal had challenged hundreds of prominent scientists during the previous half century. Word of their research, a decade later, attracted the attention of the Eastman Kodak Company, which bankrolled their further experiments. The result was the spectacular release of Kodachrome in 1935, a major breakthrough that dramatically changed the face of color photography.

1939
Von Ohain, Jet Turbine Engine

Dr. Hans Pabst von Ohain 1911-1998
After earning a Doctorate in Physics from the University of Göttingen in 1935, Hans Pabst von Ohain began conducting research at the University's Physical Institute. The following year, he started working for the German aircraft builder Ernst Heinkel, conducting secret experiments for producing a jet turbine engine. The two together invented the jet engine which was used to power the Heinkel He 178 aircraft on its historic flight on August 27, 1939. After World War II, von Ohain immigrated to the United States and became an engineer for the U.S. Air Force where he became Director of the U.S. Air Force Research Laboratory in Dayton, Ohio. He was elected to the International Aerospace Hall of Fame in 1982.

Diesel, Diesel Engine

Rudolf Diesel 1859-1913

Even in France, but educated in Germany at the Technische Hochschule of Munich, Rudolf Diesel worked mostly in Switzerland and Paris. In 1885, he began experimenting on an internal-combustion engine that would be used widely in automobiles, trains, ships and stationary power plants. Known as the diesel engine, it was first demonstrated successfully in 1893 and further improved in 1897. The first version which was made to run in 1897 was a great commercial success. It was used to make the automobile a practical thing. Diesel also developed a power source in which the diesel engine was powered by an electric generator. This power source could be used to drive ships, boats or locomotive trains.

1893

Zeppelin, The Zeppelin Balloon

Ferdinand von Zeppelin 1838-1917

A German military officer in the armies of Württemberg, Prussia and Imperial Germany, Ferdinand von Zeppelin served as a military observer with the Union Army during the American Civil War. It was during that tour of service that he made his first balloon ascension in St. Paul, Minnesota, in 1891. He retired from the German army with the rank of lieutenant general in order to work on developing the rigid airship that is now commonly called the Zeppelin. Nine years later, on July 2, 1900, near Friedrichshafen, the LZ-1, the first of the Zeppelins, made its maiden flight. During World War I, Zeppelin's rigid dirigibles helped the German war effort. In the years between the two world wars, von Zeppelin's distinctive aircraft gained popularity around the world for their transatlantic commercial flights.

1901

Röntgen, X-rays

Wilhelm Conrad Röntgen 1845-1923

Wilhelm Conrad Röntgen was the first scientist to be awarded the Nobel Prize for Physics. He was thus honored in 1901 in recognition of his revolutionary breakthrough in medical science as a result of his discovery of X-rays, also known as Röntgen radiation. His published scientific papers on his discovery of X-rays generated great excitement both in scientific circles and amongst the general public. Medical researchers were quick to grasp the significance of Röntgen's discovery that allowed doctors to better diagnose and develop appropriate therapies for conditions in the body that were not previously discernible. X-rays can also be used to stop the spread of malignant tumors. Röntgen never patented his invention or sought to profit financially from his discovery of X-rays.

1958

von Braun, Satellite

Wernher von Braun 1912-1977

This German-born engineer earned a doctorate degree from the University of Berlin in 1933. Shortly after gaining his Ph.D., von Braun became the technical director of a large German military rocket development facility in Peenemünde. His work resulted in the development of the V-2 missiles that were used to bomb England during World War II. Following the defeat of Germany, von Braun, after surrendering to the Americans, was offered the chance to work for the U.S. military. He came to America and continued his research at the Army Ordnance Corps test facility at White Sands, New Mexico. Von Braun and his team worked on space exploration for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). He and his army team of rocket researchers were responsible for the launching of the first American satellite, Explorer I, on January 31, 1958.

Elle Macpherson

Australian born Supermodel/Actress Elle Macpherson is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful and recognizable women in the world today. "Discovered" at the age of 16 while on holiday in America, the six foot tall and fit actress has gone on to superstardom as one of the most photographed women ever. A picture of health and beauty.

Elle has graced the cover of hundreds of magazines, starred in a number one selling fitness video, and she has conquered the silver screen with feature roles in several popular films. An "unofficial ambassador" of Australia, Ms. Macpherson is truly a world icon and has transcended the traditional career of a supermodel.

PREHISTORIC MAMMALS

Mammals began to appear on Earth about 220 million years ago. For more than 150 million years, throughout the Jurassic and Cretaceous periods, mammals were small scavengers and plant eaters, living in the shadow of the dinosaurs.

The world underwent cataclysmic changes at the end of the Mesozoic Era, when the dinosaurs disappeared. New environments, including rain forests and savannas, provided favorable conditions for a diversity of mammals.

The Ice Ages that began 2 million years ago put pressure on many species and the total number shrank drastically. Rapidly changing climates prompted sweeping evolutionary changes. Large mammals with a high degree of mobility developed complex nervous systems capable of making increasingly sophisticated responses.

Scott 268

The dinosaurs and their kin — the crocodiles and flying pterosaurs — dominated the air, land and waters of the earth during the Mesozoic Era. This 'Age of the Ruling Reptiles' began more than 200 million years ago. During this span of almost 140 million years, some of nature's most awesome beasts evolved — carnivorous dinosaurs standing 20ft/6 m tall, plant-eating dinosaurs some 85ft/ 26 m long, an apteryx with a wingspan of some 40ft/12.2 m. The sole surviving member of this great assemblage of 'ruling reptiles' (the archosaurs) are today's crocodiles, with an evolutionary history stretching back some 230 million years.

The first step in the evolution of the ruling reptiles was taken in the Late Permian period, some 230 million years ago. A new line of small, diapsid reptiles evolved, called the 'proterosuchians'. From them radiated a variety of reptiles called the 'thecodontians'. They thrived during the subsequent Triassic period, and some of their members became progressively more skilled at walking upright on 2 legs. The dinosaurs arose from such a stock of 2-legged thecodontians, called the 'ornithomichians'. The crocodiles descended from the same line, and probably also the flying pterosaurs.

Zeppelin

the man and his airships

The first flight of the first Zeppelin airship, LZ-1, took place on July 2, 1900. The ship was 116 feet long and 38.5 feet in diameter with 399,000 cubic feet of hydrogen in 17 gasbags. She had a total lift of 27,400 pounds but weighed nearly 13 tons. This meant that only about 15,000 pounds of lift was left for the crew, fuel, and water ballast. The control surfaces consisted of tiny rudders above and below the hull at the bow and on the sides of the hull at the stern. The sliding weight was suspended 80 feet beneath the hull. The LZ-1 made only 8 miles per hour on this first flight but reached 17 miles per hour on her second flight.

Robert L. Stevens

Son of Col. John Stevens, was a great engineer and railroad pioneer in his own right. In October of 1830, he sailed to England for the purpose of purchasing rail and locomotive trains for the Mohawk and Hudson Line. Stevens was responsible for designing and developing the steel "T" rails which are still in mainline use today. The first imported shipments were laid on granite stone ties, hewn by the convicts at New York's Sing-Sing prison. Along with Isaac Dripps, Stevens was a major force in perfecting the famous "John Bull", put into regular service in 1831.

The 175th Anniversary of the First Public Railways

One hundred and seventy five years ago construction of what would become the world's first public railway began, between Stockton, Darlington and Bishop Auckland in County Durham, in North England. The Stockton and Darlington was no brainchild of a single man or group of men. It was the outcome of many years of experimentation trial and error, which cumulatively created the steam railways of the 1830's.

Some of the foremost inventors and engineers of their time were instrumental in bringing about the age of steam and the first public railways. From the wooden railway to transport stone built by Ralph Allen (1733) to the early efforts of Thomas Newcomen, James Watt and Richard Trevithick, perseverance and ingenuity was bound to replace the horse and change society profoundly, forevermore.

But it was George Stephenson whose persistence and attention to detail and his vision which enabled the Stockton-Darlington railway to be the first herald of a future in which passengers, mail, and cargo would reliably move across great strengths of rail.

THE WORLD OF SUBMARINES

1. British REVENGE class — nuclear-powered missile launcher.
2. Dutch WALPHEUS class.
3. U.S. nuclear-powered attack submarine LOS ANGELES.
4. 1,000-ton conventional French DAPHNE submarine.
5. 6,000-ton U.S. OHIO — strategic missile submarine.
6. U.S. fast attack — ROSS ten.

There are several different types of submarines. The Standard Conventional Submarine is the most common and is utilized in the navies of many nations. They are used to patrol and defend friendly coastlines. Attack Submarines are larger and more sophisticated than conventional submarines. These nuclear subs boast great range and can operate away from friendly forces for long periods. Strategic Missile Submarines are in effect, moving targets, being platforms for nuclear missiles that can be aimed against targets of surface ships or nearby land targets.

Marlene Dietrich 100th Birthday Celebration

Legends of Hollywood

Perhaps the foremost female film star of the 20th century, Marlene Dietrich was sensual and mysterious, glamorous and revolutionary. Born in Germany in 1901, the beautiful Marlene first gained notice for her husky singing voice and stage roles. Her big breakthrough came in 1930 when she starred in the film The Blue Angel. Throughout the 1930s, 40s and 50s she would star in numerous popular films, paired with Hollywood's biggest stars and directors. As the world celebrates her 100th birthday, we take a look back at the life and career of one of the all-time great entertainers.

75th Birthday

Queen Elizabeth II led a sheltered life as a child and as a Princess. When she was ten years old, her uncle, Edward VIII abdicated and her father was crowned King George VI. At once she was heir to the throne of Great Britain. After the death of her father, she was crowned Queen in 1953. For the forty-eight years of her reign she has proven to be one of the most progressive and likable women of the twentieth century.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO

LEGEND OF THE SILENT SCREEN

Rudolph Valentino (1895-1926)

Born in Castellaneta, Taranto, Italy Rudolph Valentino became one of the most strongly individual stars in the history of cinema. He fulfilled all the fantasies of the romantic Latin lover for generations of female admirers. His success following his performance in The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse (1921) was immediate. He is probably most closely identified with his characterizations in The Sheik (1921) and The Son of the Sheik (1926). His death in 1926 was accompanied by unprecedented hysteria by inconsolable female fans.

Shirley Temple the LITTLE PRINCESS

In 1939, Shirley Temple made her first full-length Technicolor appearance in The Little Princess, based on the children's novel by Frances Hodgson Burnett. In this lavish film, Shirley goes from riches to rags in Victorian England. Doubtful of her soldier father's death, she searches for him while slaving as a scullery maid — and eventually meets Queen Victoria! One of her best roles, Shirley danced ballet in an elaborate fantasy sequence and showed her dramatic acting range alongside a cast of stellar co-stars, including Cesar Romero and Arthur Treacher.

Baby, Take A Bow

was adapted from a stage play and named after the song and dance sequence that propelled Shirley to fame in her first breakthrough feature, Stand Up and Cheer. Re-teamed with her Cheer costar, James Dunn, the film also starred actress Claire Trevor as Shirley's mother. Using the contrast of innocence versus evil, this comedy/drama involved Shirley's triumph over a criminal, typical of the "gangster" films of the era. Although Shirley sang and danced in the movie, the alarming scenes showing Shirley being abducted by an armed thief were enough for Baby, Take A Bow to be banned in a few European countries!

LUNAR NEW YEAR OF THE ROOSTER

MOTHER HEN AND HER BROOD

WANG NING (11TH CENTURY A.D.)

THIS PICTURE, DONE BY WANG NING IN THE SONG DYNASTY, SHOWS A HEN WITH HER CHICKS. A COMMON TECHNIQUE EMPLOYED WAS ONE WHEREBY THE VARIOUS ELEMENTS OF A PAINTING WERE FIRST OUTLINED IN INK AND THEN FILLED IN WITH COLOR. WHILE SONG ARTISTS SOUGHT TO CREATE REALISTIC, LIFELIKE IMAGES, THEIR CREATIVITY FOLLOWED CAREFULLY CIRCUMSCRIBED PATTERNS: THEY FIRST MINUTELY OBSERVED THEIR SUBJECTS, AND ONLY THEN TOOK UP INK AND COLOR TO BRING THEM TO LIFE ON THE PAINTED SURFACE. IMBUING THEM WITH THE SPIRIT OF THE OBSERVED PHENOMENA, THIS CAREFUL ATTENTION TO TECHNIQUE CAN BE SEEN IN THIS PAINTING.

"KABALE UND LIEBE" - MODERN DAY THEATER DRAMATIZATION

2817

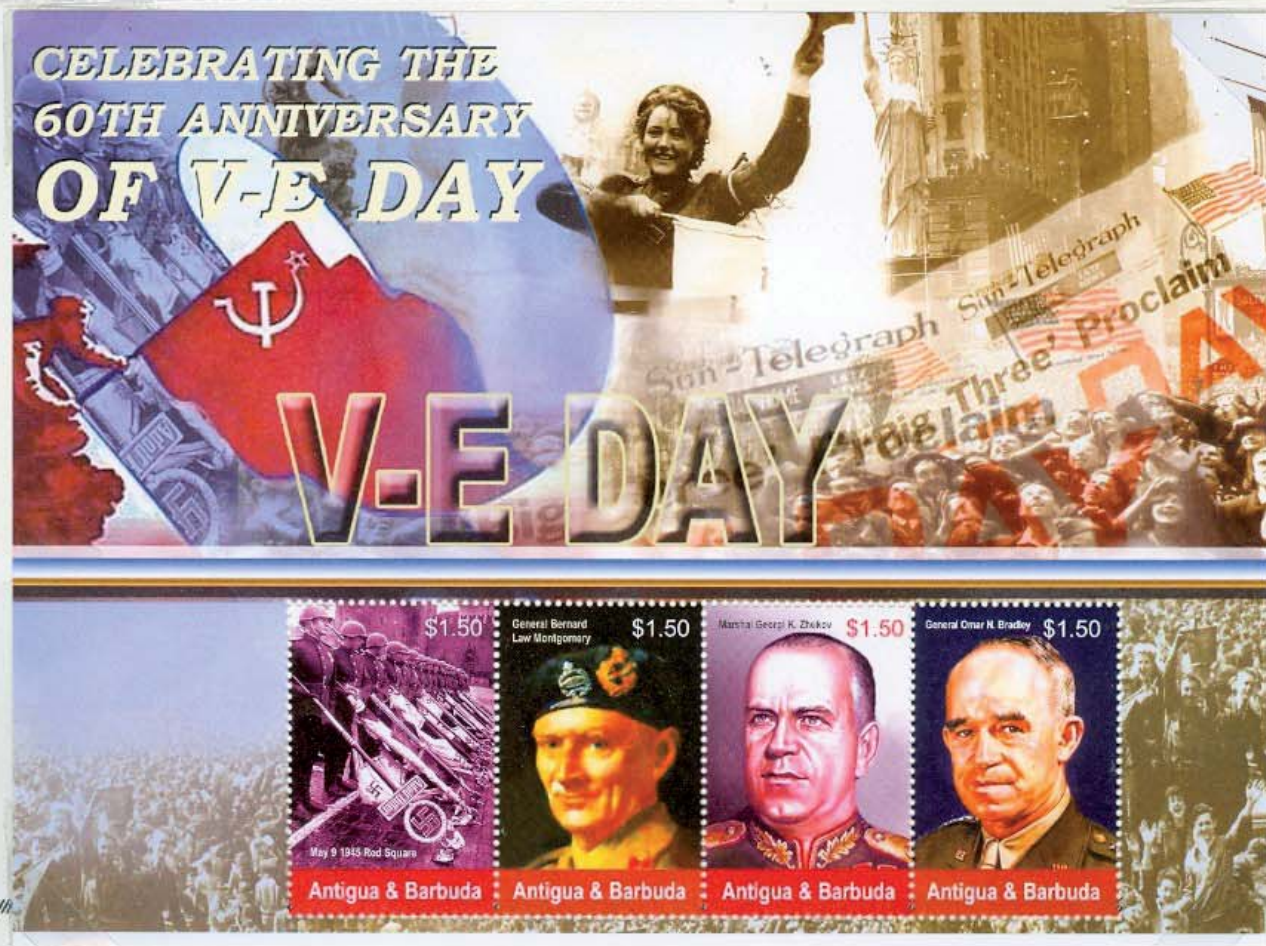

Together with H.G. Wells, the enormously popular French author, Jules Verne, was the founding father of science fiction. His satires, written for adolescents as well as adults, combined the enterprising spirit of the 19th Century and its association with scientific progress and new inventions. Written in the form of travel books, many of his writings have been hailed as prophetic. This is illustrated in "A Journey to the Center of the Earth" (1864), and "From the Earth to the Moon" (1865). The classic adventure story, "Around the World in Eighty Days" (1873) is perhaps one of his best known books of all.

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart was born in Salzburg, Austria, 27 January 1756 and died in Vienna on 5 December 1791. Considered one of the greatest musical geniuses of all time, Mozart authored over six hundred works before his premature death at the age of thirty-five.

The son of orchestra leader Leopold Mozart, he showed remarkable musical talent early in life. Mozart played the harpsichord by the age of four, composed music by the age of five and performed his first recital at the age of six for the Empress of Austria. In his short life, Mozart composed many masterpieces including symphonies, chamber music, church music, operas, and operettas. Most of his works are still famous today. Mozart's untimely passing was the world's loss. Ironically, despite his brilliance as a composer and fame and position in the Austrian Emperor's Court, Mozart was buried in a pauper's grave.
